

Hardev Kamboe

PROFILE

A second-year student seeking a summer internship for the year 2024. I get a kick out of deciphering what makes users tick and turning those insights into designs that not only look good but also feel like a breeze to use. Juggling courses has given me a solid design groundwork and a knack for playing around with various tools, but it's the collaborative projects that have taught me the real value of teamwork and empathy in crafting designs.

PROJECTS

- As part of a team project in the bachelor of UXD first year, we were tasked with improving the <https://www.isow.ca/> website. ISOW (International Students Overcoming War) aims to help international students with their education in Canada. Some of the issues with their webpage were poor site flow, unclear structure, and missing calls to action. These pain points were rectified in the revised journey map. The pain points were also validated by interviews conducted in person. Based on the pain points identified, a new wireframe (using Figma) for the <https://www.isow.ca/> website was created.
